John Grace_Transcript

What does home mean to you? Why?

Home to me is a space where you can be loved for who you are unconditionally, accepted, understood. It could be by people you know, or it could be by people you don't know. Yeah, I think home is that space you find love and safety.

What objects, items, places do you associate with home? Why?

I have tried to redefine home as a place – with or without people, it could be a quiet place but most part in the current space that we are operating in – safety is what I would say is that defining object or item or parameter what makes a home.

What emotion do you associate with home? Why?

I think the most emotion of love that I associate home with is love. We tend to have different definitions of love but mine is quite simple. Its unconditional so long as there is love in that particular space that you are in then I would believe that is the best way to associate it with home.

John Grace, Coordinator, Uganda Minority Shelter Consortium